

Charlie Chan Is Dead 2: At Home In The World (An Anthology Of Contemporary Asian American Fiction Revised And Updated)

A Literary Exploration of Identity, Culture, and the Immigrant Experience

At Home in the World: An Anthology of Contemporary Asian American Fiction, edited by Wiemer Wiemer, is a groundbreaking collection of short stories that offers a kaleidoscopic view of the Asian American experience. With contributions from an array of established and emerging writers, this anthology paints a multi-faceted portrait of the hopes, dreams, struggles, and triumphs of Asian Americans navigating the challenges of assimilation and the complexities of their heritage.

Exploring the Asian American Identity

At Home in the World provides a platform for Asian American writers to share their unique perspectives on themes of identity, culture, and the immigrant experience. Through their stories, these authors explore the complexities of being caught between two worlds, of feeling both at home and out of place.

The stories in this anthology capture the nuances of the Asian American experience, from the subtle forms of racism and discrimination to the more overt forms of violence and exclusion. They also celebrate the cultural richness and resilience of Asian American communities, showcasing the diversity of experiences and perspectives within this vibrant and ever-evolving demographic.
