Family at the Heart of the Conflict

At the core of "Monarca" is the Carranza family, a wealthy and influential dynasty whose fortune is built on the tequila industry. However, beneath the glittering facade lies a web of deception, betrayal, and violence.

Ana María Carranza (Irene Azuela), the matriarch of the family, is a strong-willed woman who has kept her family together despite overwhelming odds. Her husband, Agustín (Juan Manuel Bernal), is the patriarch, a cunning and ambitious businessman who will stop at nothing to maintain his power.

Their children, Andrés (Osvaldo Benavides), Sofía (Fernanda Castillo), and Joaquín (José María Yazpik), are each grappling with their own demons and agendas. Andrés, the eldest son, is a charismatic politician who dreams of becoming president. Sofía, a successful businesswoman, is determined to prove herself outside of her family's shadow. Joaquín, the troubled youngest son, is a brilliant engineer who struggles with mental health issues.

The Carranza family's wealth and influence come with a dark underbelly. They are deeply involved in corruption, money laundering, and drug trafficking. As the series progresses, the lines between family and business become increasingly blurred, forcing the characters to confront their own morality and the consequences of their actions.

The show also delves into the corrupting influence of power. As the Carranzas climb the ladder of success, they encounter a world of dirty politics, shady deals, and ruthless ambition.
