The series begins in the late 19th century, with the arrival of Scottish immigrant John Mackenzie in the Rocky Mountains. John is a skilled trapper and hunter, and he quickly establishes a homestead in the remote Mackenzie Valley. He marries a local Indigenous woman, and together they raise a family of six children.

The Mackenzie children grow up to be strong and independent, but they also face their share of challenges. The wilderness is a harsh and unforgiving place, and the family must learn to rely on each other to survive. They also face prejudice from the outside world, as they are seen as outsiders by both white settlers and Indigenous people.

Despite the challenges, the Mackenzie family perseveres. They build a successful homestead, and they raise a family of their own. The series follows the lives of the Mackenzie children and grandchildren as they navigate the changing world around them. They experience love, loss, and adventure, and they learn the true meaning of family.

The Mackenzie Mountain series is a sweeping epic that tells the story of a family's struggle to survive and thrive in the Canadian wilderness. It is a story of love, loss, and adventure, and it is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit.

The Characters

The Mackenzie Mountain series features a large cast of characters, but the main focus is on the Mackenzie family. The family is made up of six children: John, Mary, James, Sarah, William, and David.

John is the eldest child and the leader of the family. He is a skilled trapper and hunter, and he is fiercely protective of his family. Mary is the eldest daughter and the matriarch of the family. She is a strong and capable woman, and she is always there for her family.

James is the middle child and the rebel of the family. He is always getting into trouble, but he has a good heart. Sarah is the youngest daughter and the peacemaker of the family. She is kind and compassionate, and she always tries to see the good in people.

William is the youngest son and the dreamer of the family. He is always looking for adventure, and he is always willing to try new things. David is the youngest child and the most innocent of the family. He is always happy and optimistic, and he loves his family more than anything.

In addition to the Mackenzie family, the series also features a number of other characters, including Indigenous people, white settlers, and fur traders. These characters play important roles in the story, and they help to bring the world of the Mackenzie Mountains to life.

The Setting

The Mackenzie Mountain series is set in the Canadian wilderness, in the Rocky Mountains. The setting is both beautiful and unforgiving, and it plays a major role in the story. The characters must learn to adapt to the harsh conditions of the wilderness, and they must learn to rely on each other to survive.

The series also explores the relationship between the Indigenous people and the white settlers. The Mackenzie family is caught in the middle of this conflict, and they must learn to navigate the complex relationships between the two groups.
